

CERMAK BACKS SOUTHWEST TOWNS ROAD

Rousing Meeting Held at Palos Wednesday Night To Boost New Highway

Anton Cermak, president of the Cook County Board of Commissioners, who holds the master key to the building of the much talked of Southwest Highway, gave his word of promise at a rousing good roads meeting at the Palos Improvement Club House at Palos Park Wednesday night that he would do all in his power to have this highway constructed to the County line, southwest of Orland. Mr. Cermak said that all he required was that the Southwest Towns Chamber of Commerce who sponsored the meeting appoint a committee to wait on him and say just where they want this highway located.

Palos township consists of 30,000 acres of which 15,000 acres are now Forest Preserves and tax exempt. The proposition of a new school has been quite a question for Palos as there is not enough taxable property available on which to raise money to build a new school. Mr. Cermak was appealed to and at this meeting said that he is going to seek to have the state legislature grant the county permission to appropriate money for the construction of a new school and if this request is not granted then he proposes to take money out of the county contingent fund and build the school.

Mr. Cermak made it a strong point to stress the fact that he is aiming to serve the people of the county and do things for them as they want them done wherever it is possible for him to do so.

Mr. Cermak rather startled his audience when he suddenly let lose a verbal barrage on crime conditions in Cook county and of the failure of prohibition. He quoted various statistics showing the increase of crime and poverty in Cook county since 1918. He said that the government has given us the Volstead act and therefore should enforce it. He stated that in 1918 the House of Correction in Chicago had 455 prisoners while now they have 2500. Oak Forest Infirmary had 2200 inmates on an average prior to 1918, but now houses 4500 unfortunates. Mr. Cermak further showed that a larger number of people are in the jails, hospitals and other public institutions than before the country went dry.

Mr. Cermak outlined the extensive program the county board has mapped out for improvements this year. He said that the board now has a fund of $150,000 with which it proposes to build artificial lakes and dams at Chicago Heights and in Orland township.

He further pointed out that if Cook County gets its share of the $100,000,000 Illinois road bond issue money, every highway and cross roads in Cook County will be concreted. He said that the people of this county should have had these improvements years ago, but that bickering and fighting on the county board between the 8 Republican and 7 Democratic members had delayed all this work.

P. J. Carr, treasurer of Cook county who is running for sheriff, also gave a brief talk during which he said that if he is elected sheriff of Cook county he is going to put a patrol system in effect on all concrete roads in the county so they will be safe for travel by night and day.

Among the other public officials on the program and gave addresses were John Cavanaugh, Joseph Fitzgerald, Mr. Carroll, P. D. Parker, assistant highway engineer and a number of others. Frank Sullivan, brother of Roger Sullivan, one time famous democratic chieftain of Cook county, was present and was given a seat of honor on the platform.

Mr. Parker in speaking of the construction of the new Southwest Highway said that the old roadbed of the Wabash railroad could be used from Chicago Ridge to Orland saving much grading and the bed will only have to be widened and it will be ready for use. He showed that it is absolutely essential for the villages thru which the new road is to run to co-operate with the county board to get the rights of way thru these villages. At Palos Park the old Wabash right of way runs right thru the village. It was shown that when the Cook county road program is finished Palos will be traversed by a number of important concrete roads.

S. W. Chamber of Commerce To Give Banquet May 20

The Southwest Towns Chamber of Commerce is going to give a banquet at the Southmoor Golf Club house on the evening of May 20th at which the 15 members of the Cook County Board of Commissioners will be the guests of honor. At this banquet the construction of the new Southwest highway and other important improvement projects will be considered and discussed. Tickets are to be sold for this banquet for $1.50 per plate. The Southmoor Golf Club has kindly agreed to furnish the use of the club house and its equipment for the occasion. Advance tickets will be sold and all those desiring to attend should make their reservations now with B. F. Rolfe, Secretary of the Southwest Towns Chamber of Commerce at Worth.

Mokena Council Names May 14 Cleanup Day

The village council of Mokena has designated, Friday May 14 as official cleanup day for the village and all rubbish is to be packed in barrels and boxes and placed at conveniently accessible points for the rubbish collector to pick up. Rubbish must not be placed in sacks as these often tear when lifted and there is danger of injury to those hauling the rubbish of being cut by broken glass. The cleanup work will be carried on all day. Remember the date and have your rubbish ready to be hauled away.

Mrs. Fred Marti Dies at Frankfort

Mrs. Fred Marti, aged 60 years, died Wednesday evening at 5 o'clock at her home in Frankfort. She is survived by her husband, Fred Marti, former highway commissioner of Frankfort township, two step-children and many other relatives and friends. Funeral services will be held Saturday afternoon at 1 o'clock from the late home to the St. Peter Evangelical church.

super highways to be constructed. It is to run from Chicago to the Midlothian club house, will be 40 feet wide and electric lighted.

Palos came in for much attention It was suggested that in order to attract more residents and to improve the village, sewers and sidewalks should be laid and city water and gas mains extended to the village. Mr. Sullivan rather severely criticised the people of Palos Park for not having these improvements, saying that it was entirely their own fault by their spirit of indifference and lack of co-operation. He said that it was vitally necessary that Palos Park should have a more direct road leading into it from Chicago. At present one has to drive a round about way to get into the village and for one not acquainted with the territory it is hard to find the village in its misty maze.

Dr. W. R. Schussler, president of the Southwest Towns Chamber of Commerce, opened the meeting by giving a short sketch of what the organization wanted and why its members are working for the new Southwest Highway. He showed how much a direct highway is needed between Joliet and Chicago. The many golf links and forest preserves and new subdivisions were also cited as reasons for the building of the new highway. Following a few preliminary remarks during which it was shown that a movement for a more direct highway between Joliet and Chicago was started 14 years ago, Dr. Schussler turned the meeting over to Edward Cowan of Palos Park who presided as chairman for the rest of the evening.

The president of the Palos Improvement Club and Mr. Bergstrom of the Southmoor Golf Club also spoke briefly.

Hirsch Bros., of Mokena Buy Herd of Note In Mich.

Wholesale buying of pure bred herds from breeders of other states is becoming prevalent in Will county as an aftermath of the Chicago ordinance barring milk from untested cows from sale in the city.

Fifty pure bred Holstein Friesian cattle from the herd of T. C. Fiedel of Coloma, Mich., have already been shipped to the dairy farm of Hirsch brothers near Mokena. The herd is valued at more than $15,000.

Altho the entire herd has a record for high milk and butterfat production, two cows stand out above the rest for unusually high production.

Community Inka Wayne Johanna produced more than 29,000 pounds of milk as a seven-year old at the same time showing a year's butter fat production of 1,296 pounds. As a four-year old, the same cow produced 14,193 pounds milk in an eight-months test, which also recorded 714.25 pounds of butterfat.

An average of 15,135 pounds of milk and 5709 pounds of fat was produced by 18 head of cattle during a year, altho five of the 18 cows were two-year old heifers. Average weight of the 18 was given as 1,350 pounds.

The entire herd formerly owned by the Hirsch brothers, Julius, Chas. and Carl Hirsch, was disposed of when the 50 cows were delivered from Michigan and the new herd is certified as free from tubercular germs.

"Within a short time, Will county promises to take the lead in membership in the 500-pound state butterfat club," said J. Franklin Hedgcock, county farm adviser, in commenting on the purchase of outside herds.

"Several other dairy owners in the county are re-stocking their farms with pure bred, tested cattle and it is a fore-gone conclusion that their dairy profits will be greatly increased with the working of the new stock."

Frankfort In Big Y. M. C. A. Drive

The big drive which has been started in Joliet for the organization of a Y. M. C. A. and the erection of a Y. M. C. A. building has been extended to a 15 mile radius of Joliet, which takes in New Lenox and Frankfort townships.

A drive will be opened May 11 and continue to May 18, for the purpose of raising $450,000. John R. Anderson is the general chairman with George Barr as assistant.

Ona McGovney has been named captain for Mokena, F. J. Kohlhaugen for Frankfort and Archie Corp for New Lenox. These men will take charge of the drive in their communities. Anyone wishing to contribute to this cause are asked to hand their donations to these men.

The Y. M. C. A. is an organization for the social, physical, intellectual and spiritual development of boys and young men. It is organized locally but federated in state, national and world bodies for gathering and disseminating the best methods of conserving and training young manhood. The Y. M. C. A. has become a recognized world factor, operating in 50 countries, at 9,000 centers and now enrolls approximately 2 million members. In Illinois there are 55 Y. M. C. A.'s serving boys and young men of every class.

Howard Francis Dies at New Lenox

Howard B. Francis, widely known stock man of New Lenox, and a resident of this township all his life, died suddenly at his home north of the village of New Lenox Friday morning following a brief illness with diabetes.

Mr. Francis has been engaged in pure bred stock raising for many years and carried off many prizes at the International Stock Shows in Chicago and state fairs at Springfield. Mr. Francis also served as judge at many of these stock shows.

The deceased is survived by his widow, two brothers, Wilbur and Edward and one sister, Miss Harriet Francis, all of New Lenox. There are no children. He was one of the leaders of the community and a faithful worker in the Methodist church.

Oak Lawn M. W. A. Is Active

The Modern Woodman Camp, No. 12054 held their regular meeting in the Oak Lawn School Auditorium on Saturday night May 1st. Seven candidates were initiated in the mysteries of Wood-craft, namely: Francis O'Brien, Fredrick O'Brien, Willy Simmons, Alf. Johnson, Marion and Arthur Willhoit and Luis Wojick. Colonel Frazer of Chicago Heights brought his uniformed team with him to put on the work and did it very nicely. David Williams, Dist. Deputy of Cook County attended and a large number of the local Woodmen were present. Coffee and doughnuts were served after the ceremony, by several of the ladies.

We are after several new prospects and if any one is over-looked who wishes to join us and enjoy the numerous benefits offered now by the Modern Woodman, we will only be too glad to send in their application for membership if requested.

This is an invitation to any one who can pass the examination and do it now.

Signed: Harry C. Phillips, Venerable Consul.

Mokena Telephone Manager Resigns

Mrs. Hugh Deadmore, local manager of the Illinois Bell Telephone Company, sent in her resignation to that company this week, the same to take effect June 1st.

Mrs. Deadmore has been in the employ of this company for about 20 years, five of which was spent in the Mokena exchange.

Five years ago there were 80 telephone subscribers in this exchange and now there are 122.

It is not known yet who will be the new manager.

Mr. and Mrs. Deadmore will move to Joliet where the former is employed by the E. J. & E. Railroad, which position he has held for many years.

To Shut Water Off

On account of repair work on the Village water tower, the village water will be shut off at Mokena all day next Monday.

Frankfort Couple Celebrate 30th Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. George Minger of Frankfort have traveled life's pathway together for thirty years and in commemoration of the fact they entertained 150 guests Friday evening in Frankfort hall. Guests were present from Joliet, Green Gables, Spencer, Chicago Heights and Frankfort.

A very enjoyable time was had. Lunch was served.

Mr. and Mrs. Minger were the recipients of many fine gifts.

Mother's Love

As I go journeying down life's lane,
Enjoy its pleasures, feel its pain,
I thank God every now and then
That He did give that gift to men:
The touch of a mother's love.

When I think back on bygone days,
When childhood still were all my ways,
Anew I feel that "golden" touch,
That all thru life has meant so much—
The touch of a mother's love.

When tired I pilowed my small head
In an old fashioned trundle bed,
And called to her a last "Good Night,"
She gently tucked the covers tight
With the touch of a mother's love.

And when upon the stony street
I stubbed and bruised my tiny feet,
She wiped away the stormy tears,
And soothed to silence sobs and fears
With the touch of a mother's love.

Those days of childhood long are past—
The boy became a man at last;
The mother's course, alas, is run,
For him a life has now begun
Without the touch of a mother's love.

When oft on this world's rugged road
He feels the burden of life's load,
'Tis then he longs for a brief rest,
Just for a moment to be blessed
With the touch of a mother's love.

When I shall sleep life's final sleep,
And trim my sails to cross the deep,
That gentle touch shall bless me still—
As I cross over this life's sill—
The touch of a mother's love.

Of all sweet strains thou art my theme;
O mother love, reign thou supreme!
Rock thou the cradle of this age,
The crying of a world assuage—
With the touch of thy kindly love!

CHAPTER XI—Continued

Then he was inspired to add:

"But why not let me stay here while you take mademoiselle. She would wish you for her guide. She was a young wildcat when we tried to stop her from entering the village before you gave the word."

"I am the one Damoan must capture or kill. Every one else, even mademoiselle, comes second in his plans. He will not leave the feast so long as I am there. It must be as I say. Wander about the village and use your wits in looking for a loop-hole. I will talk with mademoiselle."

To the girl I briefly repeated the orders I had given to Labrador and Six Fingers and told her I would work out the details during the day. As I had anticipated she immediately interposed objections. She would go nowhere with Six Fingers unless I was present. Labrador's company made no difference. She would not leave the village unless in my company.

"But I will overtake you," I insisted. "It is most important that I reach Virginia with the least possible delay. I shall not waste any time in following you."

"And if not for me you would already be well on your way there," she murmured. "Oh, monsieur, you are very brave! I wish I could have told you different when you spoke to me of your heart!"

Her naivete in bringing up what I supposed to be most strongly forbidden caused my mind to swirl in confusion. I could only mumble:

"We were not to speak of that again."

She further bewildered me, as, with the innocence of a child, she corrected me:

"Not for you to speak of, of course. But surely it is for me to speak of when I wish." Then sympathetically, "And does it hurt me too much if I speak of it?"

"I think it does," I promptly answered, beginning to feel very uneasy. "Yes; I am quite sure."

"Then it must not be mentioned," she sighed. "I did not fully understand. I only wanted monsieur to know I regretted."

"It is all ended. You will be ready to go with my friend?"

"Yes, I will go."

I bowed and backed from the opening. She followed me a few paces, and I was disturbed to see she was fighting to control some violent emotion.

"Monsieur."

"Yes, Mademoiselle Dahlskaarde."

"If I knew I was never to see you again there is something."

"Yes? Something?"

"Something I think I should say."

My curiosity prickled; for she was such a mixture of enigmas that one could never guess where her words would land. I had seen her as haughty as a marquise. Now she typed extreme youth and an entire lack of worldly wisdom. So conscience stifled curiosity, and I declared:

"But you will see me again. Tonight. On the river. My leaving this place is nothing. There will be a feast. Damoan will be there to watch me. His Indians will be there to help him. That gives you a free road. When I decide you have made a good start I shall laugh at them and leave."

"Merci, monsieur," she stiffly said. "You have saved me from an indiscretion. I have all confidence in your confidence."

And yet, as I walked away, there was the temptation to go back and ask her to tell what she had withheld. I tried to blame my interest in her shifting moods to my long withdrawal from civilization and its types of dainty womanhood. This, in defense of my peace of mind. The sight of Damoan leaving the stockade in company with the chief's grandson helped me to tear my thoughts from the girl and concentrate on the grim problem of the night. For, notwithstanding my assurance in talking with mademoiselle, I had no idea just how I was to escape that night.

On reaching the cabin I found Labrador waiting for me. His dark face was anxious, and he asked:

"Where is that old pirate?"

"I thought he was with you."

He shrugged his shoulders helplessly.

"Ah, that old pirate! He was with me. At my heels. Then, pouf! He was gone. Hell snatch him! I have walked and walked around this cursed death-trap, peeping into every cabin, and he is not."

I resigned myself philosophically to Six Fingers' disappearance. If he was gone then that was an end of one of mademoiselle's worries. I remembered seeing Damoan leaving the village. I began to suspect his going was a part of the game to catch Six Fingers out of bounds and do him to death. It was while I was explaining this to Labrador that Six Fingers entered the cabin and stood grinning at us in a peculiar manner.

"Back again? Where have you been?"

"Adrift," he coolly answered. "I grew tired of this devil's cage. The woman interested me for a bit, but they blacken their teeth, and when they smiled I ran. I went outside."

"You are lucky to be back alive. What is the matter with you? Your legs and arms are wet."

"I went to a brook and washed."

"How did you go without my seeing you, little spider?" asked Labrador.

Six Fingers chuckled.

"It was as simple as sailing into the wind. In the fence back of mademoiselle's cabin is a hole. It is covered from sight by vines. I saw a fowl enter the vines. She did not come back. I cruised inshore and cast the lead. I found the hole. Labrador, the big pig, was sailing before the wind. I slipped through the hole and went to the brook. And here I am, all safe and sound."

"Yet you are lucky," I warned. "Damoan and his Choctaws have been outside all the morning."

This washed the grin from his wrinkled face.

I was not satisfied with Six Fingers' explanation of his excursion outside the stockade. How could I know that he had not met Damoan outside the village and had made a compact with him? Narbonne was dead, and there was no possible chance to continue the quest for Acaanibas. I warned Labrador:

"Say nothing to Six Fingers about tonight's plans. There was a look in his eyes that tells me he is trying to hide something from us," I said.

"When I start with mademoiselle tonight I shall give him no chance to spoil the plan. Of course we shall go through the hole in the stockade?"

"Of course. And I will keep Six Fingers with me. He frightens the girl."

At midday I went to mademoiselle's cabin and called her out and informed her of the hole in the palings and warned her to be ready to leave by means of it.

"You are determined not to go with me?" she asked.

"If I planned that way none of us could go. I shall be right behind you. I shall keep Six Fingers with me."

She was relieved to know Six Fingers was not to accompany her.

"I will not fail you, monsieur," she whispered.

There remained nothing now but to wait until evening. Owing to the brief time allowed for preparations the hunters could not roam very far, and some of these were returning continually, usually with strings of small game. I tried to get some rest against the exertions of the night, but each returning hunter was greeted with much shouting, and sleep was impossible.

It was twilight when Damoan returned to the village. He went out of his way to pass within a rod of me, and the look his dark eyes gave me was one of triumph. Yet I could not comprehend any immediate danger. The peace smoke would not blow away without some warning, plus an announcement as to when it could be renewed.

With the going down of the sun the Huma women began running about the village, cackling excitedly. Fires were started in the opening before the chief's cabin. Kettles were hung over the fires and the various kinds of game were dumped in, the contributions ranging from squirrels and water-fowl to deer meat. Damoan kept to the other side of the village and had his Choctaws posted about the exit. He believed he had us bottled up until the protection of the calumet had ended.

When it grew so dark there was no danger of being closely observed. I walked to the girl's cabin, and was pleased to find the Indian women had succumbed to the temptation of the twinkling fires and had left mademoiselle unattended. I instructed her:

"After I have gone back I want you to steal behind the cabin and see if the hole is there as Six Fingers described."

"It is there. I saw him when he came through it."

"Then be ready for Labrador to call for you. When he comes you must act swiftly. Do as he says."

"The other?"

"I've told you he stays with me. He is acting queer. He's been up to some mischief. He may have bargained to sell us out."

To my astonishment she instantly denied this possibility, declaring:

"He would never sell me. No, no, monsieur. He is evil, but he wants me to escape from this village and from the man you call the Fox."

More of the mystery! I made no comment, but repeated my request that she be in constant readiness to go with Labrador. Then I wished her a stout heart and good luck.

She came to me and took one hand in both of hers and held it to her heart, and without a word retreated inside the cabin. I began to realize how horrible the whole situation must be for her. She was denied the tonic of action and must dully wait, always fearing the worst. I was back at my cabin in time to meet Little Turkey and six warriors, who, as an escort of honor, came to lead Labrador, Six Fingers and me to the feast. As we walked between them and entered the firelight I beheld the chief's grandson and a delegation of warriors performing the same courtesy for Damoan the Fox. Behind Damoan came all of his Choctaws except four left to guard the exit.

The chief gave the sign for the feasting to begin. Minute portions were tossed over the shoulders for the ghosts, and the peace calumet was hung up on a pole by the side of the chief and was made the recipient of scraps of meat and rations of beans. Strong Bow looked up and down the double line of men, bolting the meat like dogs, and asked me why the white woman was not standing among the Indian women to watch the feast. I told him she was a queen in her own country and not used to standing while men ate, and that she preferred remaining in her cabin until the dancing began, when she would appear. Damoan grinned widely and murmured:

"She will stand while I eat, my friend."

I pretended not to hear, and Damoan stared at me curiously, trying to fathom my mind. Like the fox he feared a trap, but so long as I and my male companions were within immediate reach he could not reason out where we had a single chance. Six Fingers never raised his eyes from his food, and yet he was not hungry. Labrador devoured huge portions of underdone meat with the philosophy of one who makes the most of the hour which is his. In a short space of time the kettles were emptied except what was reserved for the women, and the warriors retired to paint for their dance. I called to Labrador in French and requested him to wait on mademoiselle and ask her to come and see the dancing.

Damoan demanded my attention by asking:

"So we renew the peace smoke in two sleeps, eh?"

There was so much exultation in his tone, so much diablerie in his grinning face, that I knew he was up to some new trick, something I had not dreamed of. I guessed frantically and could not imagine what it was; yet I knew he had his plans all laid before the feast began, and that he was not dependent upon the interval between the end of the first smoke and the beginning of the second.

"Much may happen in two days," I carelessly replied.

"As true as heaven," he mocked. "And much may happen in one day—before another sun."

"What are you planning to try tonight?" I bluntly asked.

He laughed merrily, and protested:

"I try? Pardieu! Think I would break the law of the Humas? But if you should break it, eh? Come now; would the peace smoke hover over your English head for two days if it was known that you had broken the law?"

There was no guessing his meaning, although he meant death. I scoured my brains, but could find no signs which would lead me to his hidden trail. I was still pondering on this new attitude of his when the freshly painted warriors, armed with axes and bows and arrows, leaped in between the fires and began their war dance. Damoan suddenly turned his head and fiercely demanded:

"Where is my woman?"

I eased my fire by reminding him:

"Your scalp shall pay the whole price."

He leaped to his feet and spoke to the chief's grandson, who was reluctant to do what was asked. Damoan then spoke to me, saying:

"If the woman does not come the Humas will bring her."

As Labrador and the girl had had time to get far down the river trail I knew this would be some task for the Humas to accomplish. Yet I fought for more time by appealing to the chief's sense of justice, urging him to declare the white woman need not show herself at all unless she so desired.

Only the fear of Bienville, whose "word-bearer" he knew Damoan was, caused him to hesitate. He would hunt with the French and run with the English; and he suggested: "It would make the hearts of the Humas very light if the white woman would come and watch them dance."

"So be it," I said. "I will go and ask her."

I do not believe Damoan would have suspected any ruse had it not been for Six Fingers' frantic haste to follow at my heels.

"Let them stay here!" shouted the Fox. "The Iron Hand will fall and crush the Humas if they do not stay here."

"Stop," cried the chief, now in panic at the threat of the Fox, word-bearer of Bienville. "The eyes of the Humas would be made glad at sight of the white woman. I, Strong Bow, chief of the Humas, will go and ask her to come."

Damoan chuckled contentedly, and said to the chief: "We will wait a moment. There is a present the white man has prepared for his woman. He had it hid in the woods but my Choctaws found it. We will have it ready when she comes to see the dance."

He whistled shrilly, and very soon two Choctaws came trotting from the exit with a long object carried between them. As it was carefully deposited on the ground I noticed the blanket was one of those taken from Narbonne's prologue by Six Fingers when we came ashore to hide in the Indian village.

"Veer off. Hell's to pay! It was hid at the brook! The cursed scum found it!" huskily whispered Six Fingers, his deep-set eyes glaring at the two Choctaws as they took hold of the blanket. "There a black spot on my luck!"

Damoan motioned his Indians back, and because of his love of the dramatic assumed full charge of the proceedings. Striking an attitude and pointing a finger at me he harshly cried out to the bewildered Humas:

"The present of the English spy to his woman!"

And he snatched a fold of the blanket away and revealed to our horrified gaze the body of a dead Huma woman. And what was more terrible she had died by violence and her two arms had been cut off below the elbow. We were stupefied by the fearful exhibit; then with the hiss of a thousand serpents came the breath of the Humas. Damoan had opened a smaller parcel and was exposing the two severed members of the poor creature, still decorated with their bracelets of brass.

"You frog-eating fool!" madly shrieked Six Fingers at Damoan. "They are gold and you could have had half if you'd kept your meat-trap shut!"

Various Heating Methods

The ancients used stoves which concealed the fire, as the German stoves yet do. Rooms were also warmed by portable braziers. In England heating was secured by fire in an open grate and this method is still in common use, although it results in a great waste of fuel.

First Clasp Knives

Clasp or spring knives became common about 1650. They first came from Flanders, which was the seat of many and varied industries even many years before this time. A knife-cleaning machine was invented in 1844 by George Kent of England.

Not an Easy Job to Get Python to Eat

When kept in captivity, pythons often refuse food and go on a prolonged "hunger-strike," which frequently results in death.

To obviate this it is necessary to feed the big snakes by forcible means, and a writer in the Wide World Magazine gives a very interesting description of how this is done.

"It is a very simple process," he says. "Our python was carried out to a sunlit grassy lawn. One man held the snake's tail, a second bestowed its middle, while a third gripped its head and forced open its jaws. Inyorka squatted in front and, taking a pound of meat, gently thrust it into the snake's capacious throat, and with a smooth, round stick, about a foot in length, pressed the meat into the reptile's gullet. It was now the second man's job to caress the meat and massage it a yard down the long red lane No. 3 then took charge and carefully worked the lump down to the pocket where the stomach is located."

Real Frigidity

Johnny was in the habit of swearing mildly when anything did not please him. One day the minister heard him and said:

"Johnny, don't you know you must not swear. It is naughty of you to do so. Why, every time I hear you swear a cold chill runs down my back."

"That's nothing," said Johnny. "If you'd been at my house the other day when my dad caught his nose in the clothes wringer, you'd have froze to death."

A car for every purse and purpose

IN THE automobile industry several distinct price classes have developed. General Motors is represented in each.

The General Motors line of passenger cars comprises 52 different models. They include every open and closed body type and range in price-at-the-factory as follows:

CHEVROLET
6 Models—$510 to $765

PONTIAC
2 Models—$825

OLDSMOBILE
9 Models—$875 to $1115

OAKLAND
6 Models—$975 to $1295

BUICK
16 Models—$1125 to $1995

CADILLAC
13 Models—$2995 to $4485

Quality is the first law of General Motors; and sweeping economies, possible to an institution with the resources of General Motors, are reflected in the prices of General Motors cars.

Select the car that suits you from the General Motors line. You may buy it out of income on General Motors' time payment plan (GMAC), which assures fair terms and low rates.

Lame, Tired, Achy?

Are you tired, lame, achy—worried with backache? Do you suffer sharp pains, headaches, dizziness and disturbing bladder irregularities? Perhaps your kidneys need attention. When the kidneys fail to properly filter the blood, body impurities accumulate and cause poisoning of the whole system. Such a condition may lead to serious sickness. Don't neglect it! If you suspect your kidneys, why not give Doan's Pills a trial? Doan's have been used successfully over thirty-five years—are recommended by the world over. Ask your neighbor!

An Illinois Case

Lewis Gardner, Painter, 452 E. State St., Sycamore, Ill., says: "I caught a cold and it seemed to affect my kidneys. I had a lame back and dull, steady pains across my back. My kidneys were sluggish. When I had taken a box of Doan's Pills, the backache was relieved."

END BUNION PAIN FOREVER

No Need to Suffer Another Day Those Agonizing Torturing Pains.

There is one simple yet inexpensive way to reduce inflamed, swollen joints and get them down to normal and that is to apply Moore's Emerald Oil night and morning and people who suffer from such enlargements would be wise to reduce them before they reach a more or less chronic stage.

Ask any first-class druggist for an original two-ounce bottle of Moore's Emerald Oil (full strength) and refuse to accept anything in its place. It is such a highly concentrated preparation that two ounces last a long time and, furthermore, if this wonderful discovery does not give you complete satisfaction you can have your money refunded.

Special note: People who want to reduce swollen or varicose veins should get a bottle of Emerald Oil at once. Applied night and morning as directed they will quickly notice an improvement which will continue until the veins and bunches are reduced to normal.

New health in Tanlac

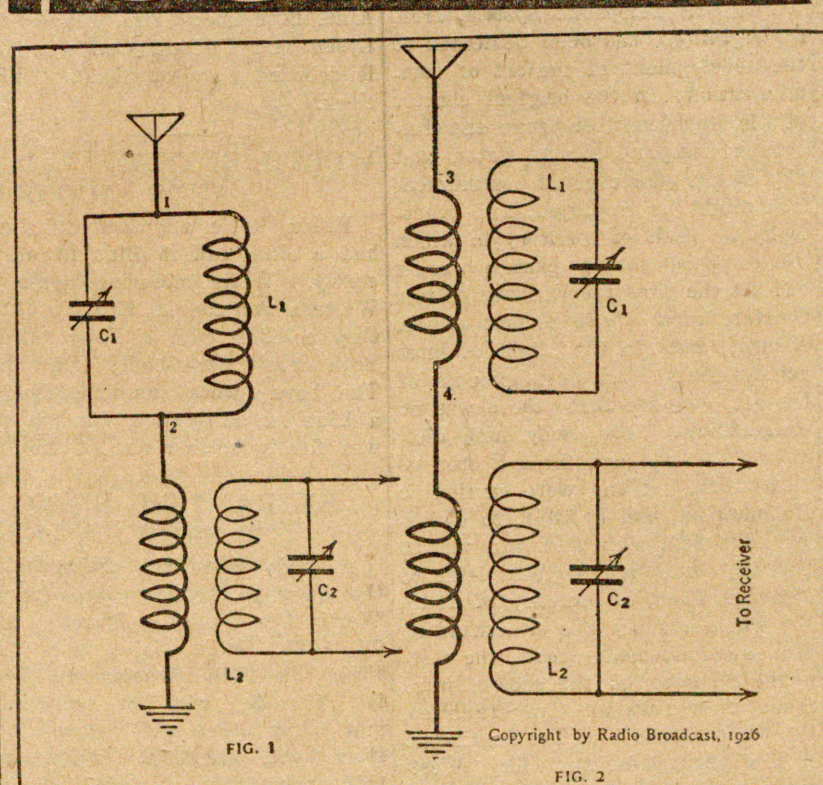

"Long hours broke my health; I was physically 'down and out.' In constant pain from chest down, could not eat or sleep. Tanlac gave me new stamina, made me a new man." Earl W. Goodman, Indianapolis, Ind.

This statement merely backs up what over one hundred thousand grateful users have said about Tanlac. Our files are packed with such testimony.

If your system is run down, if you can't seem to eat or sleep, have lost weight or suffer from trying pain, why not let Tanlac start you back to vigorous strength and health.

No long, wretched wait to get results! Tanlac starts right in to build you up. It cleans the blood, revitalizes digestive organs, fixes up the liver and makes you feel like a new person. For constipation take Tanlac Vegetable Pills.

RADIO

Wave Trap Will Cut Out Loud Locals—The Conductively Couple Form and the Inductively Coupled.

Due to the widespread increase in power of many of our broadcasting stations, the need for some sort of apparatus capable of cutting out strongly interfering stations, is becoming felt more and more. There is not much fun in sitting through the program of one particular station night after night, especially when a better program is being offered by some other station which is drowned out by the nearer or more powerful transmitter. "Interfering signals," writes Howard E. Rhodes in the Radio Broadcast magazine, "sometimes are caused by direct pickup by the coils of the set so that its natural selectivity is of no avail in eliminating them. This occurs when the set is being operated in proximity to a broadcasting station, with the result that the field strength in the vicinity is great enough to induce currents directly in the various coils of the receiver. Under these conditions it will be found possible to hear the program with the antenna disconnected."

"The only practical methods to be used in eliminating this type of interference are either shielding of the receiver or using some form of closed-field coil, such as a toroid. If the set is to be shielded, it is necessary to line the entire inside of the cabinet, including the cover and the panel, with thin copper. Any joints in the copper sheet are soldered together and connection is finally made between the shield and the minus A terminal which, in this instance, is connected to ground. This puts the entire shield at ground potential, thereby excluding from the coils any external electrical fields. It should also be pointed out that this shielding will also eliminate any interference caused by power lines, motors, etc., provided they are causing trouble by setting up currents directly in the coils. However, if the interference is reaching the set by way of the antenna system, shielding will be no aid. The use of toroid coils is coming into very common use in instances where there is need of an inductor that is unaffected by external fields."

Why Toroid Coil Is Favored.

The gist of Mr. Rhodes' explanation why the toroid type of coil is recommended for use where ordinary coils will cause broad tuning by their pick-up qualities, is as follows: Toroid coils will, as is the case with other coils, have induced in their turns currents which ordinarily would nullify the selective qualities of a receiver. However, the voltages induced in opposite halves of the coil, oppose each other, and the resultant effective pick-up voltage is zero. This nullifying feature is apparent in several other types of coils, but is probably more so in the toroid. The article in Radio Broadcast continues as follows:

"There is a second type of interfering signal that causes considerable trouble, and against this type the two cures so far described are useless. If the signals being induced in the antenna are sufficiently strong, it is possible that a receiver may not have a selectivity sharp enough to eliminate them completely, although its selectivity under ordinary conditions may be perfectly satisfactory. For instance, the receiver might be operated at a location quite close to a powerful broadcasting station so that the signal strength from this station in comparison with the strength of the signals that it is desired to receive from other stations is so great as to produce considerable interference, even though the receiver is considerably detuned from the interfering signal. It is apparent then, that, in some way, this powerful signal must be impeded so as to decrease its strength. The most common piece of apparatus for use in this connection is the so-called wave trap, which is actually a filter circuit tuned to absorb the interfering signals. These wave traps are very easily constructed, and cost little. They consist merely of an ordinary coil and a condenser. The traps are connected in the antenna circuit and are adjusted so that, at the frequency of the interfering signal, they have a very high impedance, the exact value depending on whether the unit is connected in series or parallel with the antenna.

This high impedance prevents the signal from passing down through the primary of the antenna coupling and so into the receiver. At the same time, these wave traps offer a very low impedance to all other frequencies.

Methods of Operation.

"There are several methods by which these traps might be operated. Fig. 1 shows the most common method. In the drawing L_1 and C_1 constitutes the trap circuit and L_2 and C_2 the antenna coupler and tuning condenser of the receiving set. It will be seen that the trap is connected between the antenna post of the receiver and the antenna lead-in. Fig. 2 represents a slightly different method of connecting the trap in the circuit. In this latter method, the wave trap is inductively coupled to the antenna. This inductive coupling is obtained by winding a few turns of wire about one end of the coil L_1 . One end of this new winding connects to the antenna and the other to the antenna post of the receiver. This circuit is practically equivalent to that of Fig. 1 with the difference that somewhat sharper tuning is obtained."

"Whether the trap circuit of Fig. 1 or that of Fig. 2 is used, depends to a considerable extent upon the characteristics of the antenna system. A well insulated antenna with a short lead-in and a short ground wire to a good ground, such as the cold-water mains, gives best results with the inductively coupled circuit. Every effort should be made to have as good a ground and antenna as is possible, but if it is necessary to use a long ground lead to a rather poor ground system, the direct coupled wave trap will probably give better results."

"When using the latter method of direct coupling, as illustrated in Fig. 1, some small change in the tuning of the antenna condenser will be noticed, whereas with inductive coupling practically no change in tuning takes place. This represents a slight advantage in favor of inductive coupling since it will be possible to continue to use the same old dial readings after the trap has been installed."

"If the trap is poorly made," says Mr. Rhodes in conclusion, "it may not only eliminate the interfering signals but will also decrease the strength of those signals we desire to receive. The most common cause of poor results with wave traps is due to the use of high resistance coils and low-grade condensers. It is therefore essential that the trap operate efficiently, and in order to obtain such operation, it is generally best to use a fairly small coil and a large condenser. With a large coil the elimination is usually more complete but the neutralized band is larger so that the trap interferes with reception on wave lengths adjacent to that wave on which the interfering station is operating. Most satisfactory results are obtained when low loss coils are used, such as space wound solenoids, while a toroid may be used in the inductively coupled circuit."

FOR THE NOTEBOOK

The ideal aerial is one which is away from all interference.

There is more static in defective grid leads than in all the heavens. In making a loose coupler, both coils are wound in the same direction.

A crystal can be tested by hooking it in series with a 22½-volt "B" battery and a milliammeter. The reading should be 1½ or 2 milliamperes or better.

When the receiver is located in the suburbs or some distance away from the broadcasting station, a long aerial upward to 600 feet can be used to advantage.

The average life of a vacuum tube is from 1,000 to 2,000 hours' constant use.

It is poor policy to experiment with a set that is believed to be in perfect working order. One is apt to throw something out of adjustment, or even entirely ruin many of the parts.

Storage batteries should be given a drink of distilled water occasionally.

NELLIE REVELL Says:

FAME and fortune are things that not everyone can have. But to have a friend, even though he be only a four-legged one, compensates for a lot of things. In the public ward of the hospital in which I once dwelt, there lay a human derelict. He had no visitors, he had no money, but he did have one friend.

Day and night for eleven weeks a yellow creature of the type commonly referred to as "pup," "ki-yoodle," or "cur" gave a marvelous exhibition of loyalty while pawing out a living from the garbage cans at the rear of the hospital where his owner was confined.

Pete—for that, I understand, was the dog's name—never left the sidewalk, from the day he arrived in the wake of the patrol wagon in which his friend was brought. Once he eluded the doorman, gained admittance to the hospital and found his way to a cot. There he heard "his master's voice." Whatever understanding they had between them seemed to satisfy Pete, for he went out and resumed his vigil at the door.

Every box office treasurer hears of defective vision and hearing so often he thinks an eye and ear hospital should adjoin every theater. A prospective patron mumbled something about, "Can't see very well and a little deaf," to Charles Thomas in the box office at the Century theater in New York last week. At the moment Thomas was toying with a bank pin which he accidentally flicked out of his hand to the public side of the window.

The patron, a courteous, middle-aged woman, immediately stooped with alacrity, picked up the pin from the floor and restored it to Thomas through the window. The treasurer could not resist a smile at the thought of the alleged defective vision. The woman "got wise" also.

"I'm taking my grandmother," she said. "It's she who can't see very well and it's my hearing that's bad."

The alibi was good for "two down front."

Someone is always inquiring how my trouble started, and how did it happen, meaning, when did I first notice I had been shell-shocked in the battle of life. That question is about as easy to answer as "How high is up?" It is as impossible to determine when it started as it is when it will end. And the contributing causes were as numerous as the treatments. It came slowly and gradually. The doctor said it would leave the same way. I know now he was right about the "slowly." But I have found out what hope is. It's the thing that, when you are playing solitaire and find yourself stuck without a move, makes you run through the deck once more trusting you'll find a way out. That's hope.

Whatever illusion I may have had that I was good copy was dissipated recently by my nurse.

In taking me out of bed she always lifts my feet first before attempting to hoist me up. The other day she swung me around, and, reaching under my shoulders, stood me on my feet. I landed right in the waste basket that was standing near the bed. Which makes me wonder if she is as ignorant of newspaper customs as she pretends to be. If it really was accidental or if she has a news sense. One thing is certain, that if she dumps me in the wastebasket I will escape the composing room and will not be left in the overset.

Some time when you are "bored to tears," suffering from ennui or delving for a new thrill just try bringing (not sending) a few boxes of candy to the children's hall of some hospital. Or a few cartons of cigarettes to the men's hall (be sure to include matches), or a few baskets of fruit to the women's hall.

Ask the person in charge to let you see her distribute it, and if you don't say you have had the thrill of your life it is time for you to leave this planet and seek a new universe, for there isn't a thrill left in you.

"Do you think I'm happy?" as the late-lamented Joe Welch used to say in opening his monologue. I was far from it. I was not having half the fun in the hospital that my mental flip-flops might have led others to believe. Those who know me can hardly imagine me convulsed with joy at having to lie on my back all done up like Joan of Arc, staring at the ceiling of a sunless room for four years. The only outside views of life I had were through a window which overlooked some factories and wholesale houses.

But there was one other thing to be seen through the window and whenever I felt myself yielding to an attack of self-pity I looked at it—the flag atop the Fourteenth street armory. The sight of it made me think of those boys who got their wounds doing some real good for the world and are still in casts and braces and on hospital cots far from home and friends. When I compared my lot with theirs it made me hate my impatience and wish I could divide some of my luxuries and comfort with them. It wasn't treason—but it seemed to me that the theatrical folk were taking better care of their wounded than the government was.

Cement Railroad Ties Being Tried in South

The great and constantly increasing scarcity of wood has driven the railroads to the point of finding a substitute for timber in the laying of the roadbed. Various forms of metal ties have been experimented with, but as a rule they have been found faulty, but it seems that it is likely that the cement tie will be found to solve the problem.

A group of reinforced ties laid nine years ago at Eagle Pass, Texas, was recently taken up and each one was subjected to the closest examination and no evidence of impending failure was to be found. In fact it was the opinion of the engineers making the examination that the ties were just as good as when laid.

In addition they had overcome some of the shortcomings of the wooden tie. The success of this experiment has prompted the officials of the Southern Pacific railway to lay some ties of the same type upon that line.

No Time Like the Present

The parents of a local four-year-old spend each day in the grocery store and she is left at home with her aunt. Recently she was taken with her parents for a day and enjoyed herself by sampling most everything in reach. Finally, after she had eaten more candy than her mother thought was for her good, she said: "Now, Bernice, you must not eat any more candy; you're not used to it."

"Well, I'm getting used to it, though, mother," she replied.—Indianapolis News.

Ambition

It happened on the small-time floor of a vaudeville booking office. A team which came from the Midwest six months ago to "show them a real act" had been canceled after the first performance in seven different theaters, but could not be licked.

"We've got some new gags," timidly chirped the woman of the combination. "Give us another chance."

"Good Lord!" ejaculated a booker. "Are you still stage-struck?"—New York Graphic.

of the world's telephones. Professor Bell exhibited his telephone at the Philadelphia Centennial in 1876. It worked, but the persons who heard it were skeptical. They did not believe the invention was anything more than an interesting toy and publications of that day commented favorably on it, but pointed out that its usefulness was questioned. However, back of the telephone were men of rare foresight. They new the telephone was commercially practicable and some day would play an important part in the world's history. They started a long and eventful struggle to give the telephone its proper place among the country's public services. It was many years before the vision of these men materialized. Early in the telephone's career they prepared a set of principles to be lived up to in offering telephone service to the public. The keenness of their vision and good business judgment are shown when it is remembered that today we are operating under virtually the same principles as laid down by the pioneers. Telephone service in Illinois is furnished by 581 telephone companies and 250 mutual organizations, which operate slightly more than 1,500,000 telephones. Of this number, 1,115,000 are owned and operated by the Illinois Bell Telephone Company, which also owns and operates 25,000 telephones in adjoining counties in Indiana. Practically all of these telephones are connected to the Bell System, which gives them access to the balance of the 17,000,000 telephones in the United States.

The Bell Telephone System is made up of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, twenty-six operating companies in the United States and Canada (of which the Illinois Bell Telephone Company is one), the Western Electric Company and the Bell Telephone Laboratories.

The American Telephone and Telegraph Company own and operates the long distance lines necessary to connect up the various operating companies, which furnish telephone service in their respective territories.

The Western Electric Company is the manufacturing unit of the Bell System. Here we have a condition not often found in large industries. Instead of the industry being dependent upon the manufacturer, we have a case here of the manufacturer being dependent upon the industry.

The Bell Telephone Laboratories is the development and research unit of the Bell Telephone System. All of these agencies working together comprise within themselves all phases of telephone service—development, manufacture and operation. Under this arrangement we have one policy, one system, and universal service throughout the United States.

The Bell Telephone System, from its beginning, has been dedicated to the development of the art of communication. In the original charter of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company it was stated that any means whatever of communication might be employed, and practically no limit of territory in which the company should operate was fixed. At the time the wording of this charter must have seemed almost absurd, but in the light of later achievements and developments of the art, we see that there was no exaggeration. The early long distance lines extended from Boston to New York, then were carried to Philadelphia, and in 1892, to Chicago. The next step westward was to Omaha, and a few years later to Denver. Then, in January of 1915, the whole country was electrified by the announcement that the telephone had acquired the spoken word from New York to San Francisco, the entire breadth of the continent. A few years later the Key West-Havana submarine cable was laid and it is now possible to talk between Havana and other parts of Cuba across the continent of North America to Los Angeles and to Catalina Island, a total distance of 5,500 miles.

PASSES AWAY

Mr. Loebe, well known resident of Orland and southwest towns, was buried Thursday, April 29th, from the Orland Methodist church. The services were conducted by the Masonic Order of which he was a member.

PASTOR HAS NEW HOME

Rev. Paul T. Sanders, who has made his home with Mrs. Brebach, has moved from the Hildebrand house on Harlem Avenue to the Molde home on the corner of Depot St., and Crandall Avenue. He will be at home there to Worth Community. Mr. and Mrs. Molde are making their home temporarily with the McEatherns until their new one in Oak Lawn is completed.

NEW DIAMOND FOR

BASEBALL TEAM

Mr. Carl Bishop obtained permission for the Worth Community Church Baseball team to use the railroad property on 11th St., near Ridgeland for the baseball diamond. The boys are now getting it in shape and hope to have one of the best diamonds in the southwest towns when it is completed.

LOCALS

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Lange, who have made their home in Cicero during the winter months, have returned to Worth and are planning to make their residence here permanent.

Mrs. Harold Ferrin arrived home Monday April 26th from the St. Francis hospital in Blue Island. Robert Wesley and his mother are reported to be doing nicely by an exuberant father. The son and his bids fair to follow in the Daddy's footsteps. It is said that he has a decided leaning towards the large garage on 11th and Depot Streets.

Mrs. Carl Bishop who has been a shut-in for some time is able to be out again.

The last of the Star Concert Series was held at the Worth Community church Monday night, April 12th, the La Salle Quartette entertaining. The quartette gave a very interesting program including two very artistic impersonators; Mr. Arnold Kipp as Harry Lauder and Mr. Andrew Grant as an Indian chief. The five concerts have proven very successful and we hope to enjoy the Star Concert Series again next year.

Miss Nellie Hildebrand attended the wedding of her sister Harriet, Friday April 23rd. John Groot is the lucky bride-groom and 'incidentally' Nell's brother-in-law 'Johnny'.

Miss Myrtle Critten who has been confined to the County hospital for sometime, is now convalescing at her home in Coal City, Ill., and her sister, Mrs. Fredericks, is working at the Oak Hills Golf Course.

It is reported that the Wabash Railroad is putting on two new trains; One, a midnight theater train accommodating those wishing to attend the theater or other amusements.

Mr. and Mrs. Molde are building a new home in Oak Lawn. It is being constructed by Mr. A. Crandall of Worth and will be completed about the first of July.

Mr. McCauley just completed a well for Mr. Ed. Teason. He obtained a very good flow of water at 153 feet. He is now drilling a well on the Hosenfang property.

The Boys Athletic Club of Worth Community Church held its first meeting Thursday night, April 29th. They had election of officers. Harry English being elected President, Ed. Rolfe, Secretary, Paul Mitchell, Vice President, Kenneth Lucas, Treasurer, Albert Soderlund, Sargent at Arms and Elmer Lysen and Ed. Teason promoters.

OUR CORNER

ANNOUNCEMENT HAS BEEN made of the betrothal of Miss Imogene Crandall to Frank Cure of Orland, Ill. Miss Crandall is an active leader in the social circle of Worth. She will be sadly missed in the music world as well as the social activities of the younger group. Our best wishes are extended to the couple and the hope that in the finding of the new, the old friends will not be forgotten.

WE ARE ALSO HAPPY TO ANNOUNCE the engagement of Mrs. Mary Marrs to Mr. Homer Search of Palos Park. The young couple are planning to make their home in Chicago to the regret of their many friends residing in the community.

THE BI-MONTHLY MEETING of the Evergay Club was held at the home of Miss Hazel Stromberg on April 29th. The absence of Robert Wesley Ferrin, was greatly deplored by those desirous of obtaining a glimpse of this, our latest member.

MRS. D. L. CRANDALL WHO has been visiting relatives and friends here for several weeks, is planning to return to her home in Spearfish, S. Dak., Thursday, April 29th. The best wishes of those who have had the pleasure of her company go with her.

Man and the Flowers.

The fragrance of plants is not for man's pleasure; it is a means of attracting insects to fertilize them. The object of many present-day florists is to improve a flower in its coloring, size and substance—in short to "paint the lily." They cannot improve the fragrance, which is perhaps the reason they seem to care so little for its disappearance under their handling.—Exchange.

Liberty

PROCLAIM Liberty throughout all the land, unto all the inhabitants thereof—this was the legend inscribed on what was later to be known as the Liberty Bell, when it was recast in Philadelphia in 1753.

Twenty-three years later this prophetic admonition was carried out when the now historic bell heralded the adoption of the Declaration of Independence.

A century after this assertion of American liberty, Alexander Graham Bell gave to America and to the world, in the telephone, an instrumentality of a new form of freedom. Limitations which had confined the scope of the spoken word were swept away. Doors of isolation were thrown open. In his contacts with his fellows, man had achieved a new independence.

For fifty years this emancipation of speech has undergone an unceasing evolution into a larger and ever larger liberty. Year by year man's voice has reached out over greater and greater distances until to-day it speeds from coast to coast, borne on the wires of a nation wide telephone system.

Lesson for May 9

ABRAHAM AND THE KINGS

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 14:1-24.
GOLDEN TEXT—In all these we are more than conquerors through Him that loved us.—Rom. 8:37.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Abraham Saves Lot From Danger.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Abraham Rescues Lot.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Abraham's Courage and Generosity.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Victory Through Faith and Courage.

I. Lot Taken Captive (14:1-12)

Lot's misfortune was due to his selfishness in choosing the best land regardless of the moral risks in his associations (13:10, 11). The Jordan valley was very fertile, but a place of moral snares because Sodom was there. Frequently fine pasture for cattle contains poisonous growths. Lot's trouble was not primarily because he was a bad man, but because of his associations. The steps taken by Lot as shown in chapter 13 were:

1. He lifted up his eyes and beheld (v. 10).
2. He chose him all the plain (v. 11).
3. He dwelt in the cities of the plain (v. 12).
4. He pitched his tent toward Sodom (v. 12).
5. He dwelt in Sodom (14:12).
6. He sat in the gate of Sodom (19:1).
11. Abraham Rescues Lot (13-16).

1. News brought to Abraham (v. 13). Abraham was in a place of safety. Just why the man who had escaped came to Abraham with the news we do not know. Perhaps Lot had requested him to tell Abraham of his misfortune, making known the fact of his kinship and through him appealing for help.

2. Abraham in pursuit (vv. 14, 15). Abraham, the great-hearted, forgot Lot's selfishness and ingratitude, organized his servants and by a night attack defeated the enemy. Abraham might just have left Lot to his fate, but because Lot was his brother he forgot his wrongs.

3. Lot rescued (v. 16). Not only was Lot saved, but the women and his goods were rescued. Because Abraham was separate from Sodom he was able to save his brother. The one who is separate from the world has power to overcome it, while the one who is joined to the world is helpless and is carried away with its ruin.

III. The Ministry of Melchizedek (vv. 17-20).

Melchizedek, a mysterious person, suddenly appears on the scene. His name signifies "king of righteousness." He was also king of Salem. Salem means peace. The name is descriptive of his office, rather than a proper name. He is a type of Christ. The following features are suggested by A. T. Pierson:

1. He represents a primitive universal faith, antedating, outranking and surviving the Levitical.
2. He was the priest of the Most High God—a more comprehensive name than Jehovah.
3. His order of priesthood was not local or temporary, but universal and permanent.
4. He outranked even Abraham, who paid him tithes as to a superior.
5. He was prophet, priest and king—all in one, a sort of threefold personage.
6. He was not reckoned according to human genealogy nor limited course of service.
7. He was both king of righteousness and king of peace. Righteousness pertains to the name of the Father and peace, to the realm. Abraham gave tithes to Melchizedek, as this was the standard of giving in the Old Testament, but the New Testament puts giving on a higher plane. In I Corinthians 16:1 the believer is instructed to give as the Lord prospers.

IV. Abraham and the King of Sodom (21-24).

The king of Sodom offered Abraham reward. Abraham was quick to discern his peril in receiving gifts from him. He knew that what he had done was through the grace of God upon him. He would not use this grace for private gain, would not complicate himself with the world for the sake of money. He anticipated this temptation and had covenanted with God not to yield to it (vv. 22-23). Ministers and evangelists have made grievous mistakes in receiving and even seeking financial help from godless people. The God who is possessor of heaven and earth does not need the help of the world. The world must not have opportunity to boast.

Our Punishment

The seeds of our punishment are sown at the same time we commit the sin.—Hesiod.

Tears

Tears are often the telescope through which men see far into heaven.

Beautiful Within

"I pray Thee, O my God, that I may be beautiful within."

Searching for the Lost Coin

By REV. GEORGE E. GUILLE
Extension, Department, Moody Bible Institute, Chicago.

TEXT—Either what woman having ten pieces of silver, if she lose one piece, doth not light a candle, and sweep the house, and search diligently till she find it? And when she hath found it, she calleth her friends and her neighbors together, saying, Rejoice with me; for I have found the piece which I had lost. Likewise, I say unto you, there is joy in the presence of the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth.—Luke 15:8-10.

In the first part of this fifteenth chapter of Luke, our Lord answered, in His own behalf, the complaint of the Pharisees against His reception of sinners. In this second part He answers, though more covertly, in behalf of the Holy Spirit.

Rev. G. E. Guille.

The central figure here is a woman, one of the Bible's well-known pictures of the church of God. And thus directly does the Lord represent the Holy Spirit in the woman who is directly the figure of all the saints. For the Holy Spirit works through the Word of God, having no other instrument. But the Word is proclaimed by His people, and this is the church's commission and her only one.

And in keeping with this do we see the lamp lighted for the search. With Christ away, because rejected by the world, it is night, and how great is the need for this light in the darkness! The Spirit, working through the Word, in the hands and on the lips of God's people, is the sufficient, as the only light to search out the hiding place of the lost coin.

A lost piece of silver! In this the Lord reveals the value of a soul to Him. The ransom money in Israel was paid in the silver half-shekel, and in that which this symbolizes, the precious blood of Christ, the value of a soul for God is seen. "What shall I profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul?"

So the woman sweeps the house. And upon her knees at the work, for the short broom of the East made this necessary. And herein the Lord sets forth the church as it should appear according to His own mind, on her knees, diligently seeking for the souls that He prizes so highly. And though it raises the dust, this sweeping cleans the house and finds that which is lost. The church needs this cleansing and the dust must at times be raised, for men must be stirred up about their careless ways, about their sins and about their disregard for the lost. All revivals have exemplified this method.

But it is the house that is swept. And this reminds us of the responsibility of each individual among those who compose the church of God. It is in the family and among his own kinsmen and friends that he is to search out the lost, and where he shall find the greatest gain. The testimony in the the Lord Jesus Christ!

Christ's Life

Christ's life outwardly was one of the most troubled lives that ever lived; tempest and tumult, tumult and tempest, the waves breaking over it all the time till the worn body was laid in the grave. But the inner life was a sea of glass. The great calm was always there. At any moment you might have gone to Him and found rest. And even when His enemies were dogging Him in the streets of Jerusalem, He turned to His disciples and offered them, as a last legacy, "My peace."—Henry Drummond.

Prayer

Prayer is not merely one among many manifestations of spiritual life; it is not even enough to say that it is the first and most important. It stands by itself, and is pre-eminent. It is the manifestation of our personal relation to God; it is the essential and immediate expression of our filial relation in Christ to the Father.—Adolph Saphir.

God's Countenance

If the sun of God's countenance shine upon me, I may well be content to be wet with the rain of affliction.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

DR. FREDERICK R. GREEN
Editor of "HEALTH"

(©, 1926, Western Newspaper Union.)

OVERCOMING MIS- FORTUNE

I WENT to a remarkable dinner the other night, and yet, unless one knew all the circumstances, it would have been considered quite an ordinary affair.

It was a dinner given to a Chicago doctor by about one hundred and fifty of his friends, the leading physicians of the city.

This dinner was to celebrate the fact that the guest of honor had completed fifty years of practicing medicine. That, too, is not remarkable. I recall dinners given to Fenger, Senn, Murphy, Jacobi and other great men in the medical world but this one was even more remarkable than any of the others.

Why? Because the man to whom the dinner was given had been totally blind since he was twelve years old. Shortly after his twelfth birthday, an accident destroyed both of his eyes. Yet in spite of this fearful handicap, which would have made a helpless dependent of most men for life, he went through high school, took a full four-year course at the state university, graduated with honors, studied medicine and graduated at two well-known medical colleges and specialized on diseases of the heart, the only field in medicine where sight is not needed. He has been successful far beyond the average man with all his faculties and has for many years been recognized, not only in this country but in England and Europe as well, as one of the leading authorities on heart disease.

After his colleagues, in their after-dinner talks, had told of their love and esteem for him, he rose to reply and without a trace of the self-centered sensitiveness which most afflicted people show, he talked about his blindness in a simple matter-of-fact way and, like all great men, he attributed all his success to his mother. He said: "After I lost my sight, there was one thing my mother repeated to me constantly as long as she lived. It was: 'Never allow yourself to be dependent upon anyone.' And so he taught himself to do without his eyes. He shaves every morning, not with a safety, but with an ordinary razor. He goes to the hospital and spends hours examining patients. He spends the afternoon in his office taking care of a large practice. He plays an unusually good game of bridge. He does everything anyone else does and he has lead a long, useful, honorable life because he refused to yield to misfortune but achieved success in spite of a handicap which would have made most men helpless dependents for life.

THE PASSING OF THE CUSPIDOR

STRAWS, says the old proverb, show which way the wind blows, which is simply a terse and expressive way of saying that little things often show the changes and advances in human affairs.

One of our national customs, to which foreign visitors used to refer as a universal habit, was spitting. It never was a pleasant habit but it used to be widespread and general. In railroad trains, street cars, depots and theaters it was common. Evidently, it was just as common at home as it was in public.

Every one whose memory runs back for thirty years or more can remember the cuspidor (to use the more refined name for what was commonly called a spittoon) which ornamented nearly every home. A common tin or wooden one in the kitchen, a brass one in the library or sitting room, but in the parlor a lovely china hand-painted one. It was just as much a fixture as the marble-topped center table, the stereoscope with the views of President Garfield's funeral and of Niagara falls in winter or the heavy gilt cornice from which hung the stiffly starched lace curtains that were then considered a mark of social standing.

In public places, cuspidors were not only conspicuous; they were even considered indispensable. No one ever thought of such a thing as getting along without them.

Every one has known that spitting, as a national habit, is rapidly passing away. No intelligent man, to say nothing of a well-bred person, thinks today of spitting in any public place and let us hope that it is as seldom done in private as it now is in public.

A surprising evidence of the passing of this nasty, disease-spreading and very unpleasant habit is found in the completion and opening of the new Union station in Chicago. The newest, the most elaborate and in many ways the most complete railroad station in the country if not in the world, and there isn't a cuspidor in the whole enormous building, not even in the smoking rooms and toilet rooms.

What has caused this change in our habits? Many things, no doubt, but one of them at least, I think, is the moving picture. Notice that when anyone spits in a picture now, even if it's only Snooky, the trained chimpanzee, everybody in the audience laughs.

It always was a dirty habit and when it goes we will all live in a cleaner and healthier world.

NO WOMAN CAN KEEP HOUSE EFFICIENTLY

Without Good Health

MRS. FRANK DINDORE
823 PIERCE AVENUE, LANCASTER, OHIO

Four Walls Can Make a House, but it takes a Woman to Make a Home

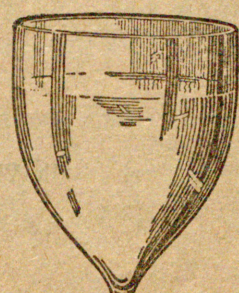

To be a successful homemaker, a woman must guard her health. When mother is not well, the home is upset. Women everywhere are learning through their own personal experiences, as these women did, the merit of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Lancaster, Ohio.—"For ten years after my marriage, I had poor health.

I was on a visit to my sister in Utica, Michigan, and she had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Her husband got me a bottle and I took it and felt so much better that I got a second one. Now, whenever I feel run-down I take the Vegetable Compound and soon feel all right again. I have had three little girls in the last six years and do all my housework, sewing, washing, and ironing. My time is pretty well taken up, but I will answer any letters I receive."—Mrs. FRANK DINDORE, 823 Pierce Avenue, Lancaster, Ohio.

Sturgis, Michigan.—"I am very thankful for what your medicine has done for me and have recommended it to others. I took it to give me strength before my baby was born. I would have to stop work and lie down sometimes all the afternoon. I felt as if I did not care whether anything was done or not. I got tired out so easily. One day I found a little book on my porch and that night I showed it to my husband and he went down town and got me a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. The medicine has helped me so much that I was soon able to do my work, and when my baby was born, my nurse, Mrs. Forbes, said it was the easiest birth she had ever attended. I will be more than pleased if I am helping someone else by giving my testimonial."—Mrs. EDWARD PERSING, 208 Surprise Ave., Sturgis, Michigan.

Conquer Constipation with Yeast Foam!

For constipation try this: drop a cake of Yeast Foam in a glass of water; let stand for five minutes; stir with spoon; let settle and drink the milky water, including the white precipitate.

Do this regularly and your constipation—no matter of how long standing—will be a thing of the past! Yeast Foam is equally effective for indigestion, boils, pimples, lack of weight and strength. Or, if you prefer, eat the yeast with a cracker or a piece of butter.

MOKENA

Wm. Semmler, Howard Beagley, Ona E. McGovney and Elmer Cooper attended a meeting of the South West Towns Chamber of Commerce at Palos Park Wednesday night.

Miss Luetta Darling spent the last weekend with her parents in southern Illinois.

The Misses Muriel and Myrtle Hacker left Friday for Greencastle, Indiana, to attend the May Festival at De Pau University, guests of friends attending that college.

Miss Norton and Mrs. Ferguson, teachers of the first and second rooms of Mokena public school gave their pupils a delightful treat Wednesday afternoon, by a trip to the woods, gathering flowers. The children all had a delightful time and we hope the teachers did also.

Richard Hensel is serving on the grand jury.

Mrs. Geo. Abbe and children are ill with Scarlet fever.

The banquet of the Parent-Teacher's Association which was to have been held on the evening of May 11 has been postponed and a regular meeting will be held on that night. Election of officers will take place and a good time is planned for all.

Mrs. E. G. McMahon will entertain the Ladies Aid of the Methodist church at her home next Thursday afternoon.

Mrs. Walter Fisher's brother, Isadore H. Lewis of Joliet has been assisting her for the past few days and has made quite a few acquaintances in Mokena. He also wishes to thank the folks of the community for the kindness extended Mrs. Fisher in her recent misfortune.

TINLEY PARK

The Rev. Forrest A. Fields will preach a special Mothers' Day sermon at the Tinley Park Methodist Church next Sunday morning at the eleven o'clock hour. Mr. Alfonso Mendoza, the Mexican Tenor Northwestern University will be there to sing a mother's song and Mr. George Wilkes, also from the same University will give an appropriate reading.

It is hoped that everybody in town will avail themselves of the privilege of services honoring motherhood. Let's all come. Aches Sunday morning and pay tribute to the best friend we have.

In the evening Rev. Mr. Fields will again preach a popular sermon. There will be a message of cheer for everyone who comes.

On Tuesday the Bunco Club was entertained at the home of Mrs. Barbra Holstein.

The Luther League of the Zion Lutheran church held a public bunco party at the Saenger hall Wednesday night. It was a big success.

Thursday night a company of relatives and friends assisted Mrs. Herman Schuldt in celebrating her birthday. A good time was had.

Saturday evening a number of relatives and friends journeyed to Chicago Heights to celebrate the birthday of Mrs. Wm. Umland.

The Triangle Club plan to give a dance at Saenger hall May 22. Mrs. Wm. Scheer and Mrs. V. H. Scheer attended a supper given at the St. John Ladies Aid at Mokena Wednesday night.

Man and the Flowers.

The fragrance of plants is not for man's pleasure; it is a means of attracting insects to fertilize them. The object of many present-day florists is to improve a flower in its coloring, size and substance—in short to "paint the lily." They cannot improve the fragrance, which is perhaps the reason they seem to care so little for its fragrance under their handling.—Exchange.

LOCAL NEWS

Room 4 went on a hike Thursday April 29th. All of us could not fit in the bus so the boys and our teacher, Miss Phillips went in the first bus. The girls went in the second bus. We met the boys and our teacher at Dynell Spring where we had lots of fun. There was a large swing there, also a slide and a little swing, but best of all there were 2 bears. One was brown and the other black. They did many tricks.

We played at Dynell Spring awhile and it was time to be on our way. We hiked up to Kean Ave., where we saw the grave of Felix the Fire Master's Dog. We walked down a dirt road until we came to a lake where we met a boy. We asked him where the Buffaloes were. He said we would have to go back to Kean Ave. We walked back there. Then we walked down Kean Ave. After walking a while we rested. At last we reached the buffaloes. We roasted our wieners and marshmallows. After we got through eating we walked down by the buffaloes. We played games. While we were going down the road we saw a farm house on a hill. We walked to Dynell Springs and played there until the bus came for us. We sang songs on the bus. We arrived home at 7 o'clock. Everyone had a good time.

WILD WEST

By Frederick Ingersoll.

Part I.

Jack was surprised to be on the ranch once more. For Jack had been away for 3 weeks out west. He went straight for the ranch house to see his friends. He found them all there and told them about his trip out East. He was going to fix the saddle on his horse when he heard a shot. Herman went outside to see where it came from. Just then he heard another shot. He looked around and saw the men at the ranch house were looking around too. He quickly drew his forty five "Smith and Wesson" and got ready to shoot. But he didn't see any sign of an Indian anyplace. He fixed the saddle on the horse and rode to the ranch house and asked a few men to go with him and see what it was. So 3 men and Billy, Joe and Jack mounted their horses. They all had their guns ready to shoot. Just then Billy saw a shell laying on the ground. Bill cried, "We've found a trace of him." To be continued.

JOKES AND RIDDLES

You can wander in the United States but you must go to Italy to Rome.

Hey you, why dont you brush your shoes once in a while? There's no hair on my shoes.

Jill—I'm afraid the bed is not long enough for you.

Jack—That's all right; I'll add two more feet to it when I get in.

Bless you, bless you, bonnie bee; Say, when will your wedding be?

If it be tomorrow day, Take your wing and fly away.

Here comes a candle to light you to bed,

And here comes a chopper to chop off your head!

Where was the first doughnut made? In Greece.

Which travels at greater speed, heat or cold? Heat because you can catch cold.

Why does a chicken three weeks and two days old, walk across the road? To get on the other side.

He—Do gooseberries have legs? She—No.

He—The I must have swallowed a caterpillar.

Cashier—I cannot cash this check. You have over drawn your account.

College Youth—Oh, that's alright. Just make me out a new account.

How did Uncle Fred happen to leave Ambrose all his wealth? He was always so miserly with his money. Ambrose gave him a ride in his Ford and Uncle Fred loosened up.

BORN TAILORS GUILD

Clothes for Sunday

WHAT has become of the old-time Sunday suit? The one that mother used to lay out on the bed for father every Sabbath morning and whose appearance was a sign for children to straighten up and remember what day it was? Of course, it was black and very severe looking, with its cutaway coat, high stiff collar and white bow necktie. The Sunday suit, however, is a thing of the past. It was an extravagance to have a suit for only one day in the week. Moreover, the man of today insists on being comfortable. So summer Sunday mornings find him donning a business suit for church, well pressed and enhanced with smart hat, tie and gloves. If he feels he must observe the day by being the least bit uncomfortable, let him wear the vest to the suit to complete the outfit.

Church over, a long afternoon and evening ahead, the business suit is put aside in favor of loose flannels, knickers, soft shirts with turn-down collars. Sports clothes that make him at home on the golf links, at the wheel of his car or when pitching a few good balls to work off that Sunday dinner. The one requirement of Sunday clothes is that they must make you feel like a different person from the one you are all week long. One day's rest in seven is essential and by rest is meant, for the most part, change. A complete change of clothing is one of the best ways of getting this variety into our lives.
